2022 Estate Pinot Noir - Terraces

---

Description

The Terraces block sits on a sloped and terraced hillside, with each individual row receiving a direct hit from the cold Pacific Ocean wind. Wrapping around Block M in a “peninsula” shape, the Terraces face varying directions - north, northwest, and due west – cascading down a steep terrain made of clay-rich loam with chunky calcareous shale soil. These facets create several different sun exposures, limited water holding capacity, and when combined with the freezing cold wind, lead to a naturally “devigorized” environment producing intense fruit. Planted in 1997 by Brent Melville and the vineyard crew, this small lot of only 4.9 acres is an interesting combination of two old-school California selections of Mt. Eden and Joseph Swan, plus three Dijon clones (115, 667 and 777). 60% whole cluster.

Tasting Notes

Aromas of black tea, salted toffee, forest floor, and wild sage are balanced with red, crunchy fruit notes of red currant, raspberries and wild mountain strawberries. Cold-climate acidity offers a bright and fresh palate, along with medium-bodied tannins. Afford this wine a couple years in the cellar for optimum drinking. Pair with miso-marinated salmon.
